Progression System

Tiered bouquet unlocks · Sales-based progression · Long-term retention design

1. Overview

- Unlock currency: Total bouquets sold (lifetime, cumulative — never resets)
- Starting state: Player begins with 2 flowers unlocked in the Budget tier and can only make Budget bouquets. All other tiers are locked.
- Design goal: Give players a long-term reason to keep returning, with quick early wins that build into a meaningful long-term goal.

The system uses an escalating curve — Budget unlocks fast to hook new players, while each subsequent tier requires roughly double-to-triple the sales of the last, keeping Deluxe a genuine long-term achievement.

2. Tier Unlock Requirements

A tier unlocks when the player has both (a) reached the required cumulative sales AND (b) fully unlocked all flowers in the previous tier.

Tier	Unlocks At	Flowers in Tier

5. Design Rationale

Early hook

Budget tier fully unlocks in just 40 sales — fast enough that a player's first session or two feels rewarding and they see real progress immediately.

Escalating investment

Each tier roughly doubles to triples the sales required of the last (40 → 140 → 350 → 680). This is a classic idle/cozy-game curve: steep enough to create a long-term goal, gentle enough that it never feels punishing.

No dead zones

Because flowers unlock within a tier on the way to the next tier, players are never grinding silently — every chunk of sales ends in a visible, celebrated reward.

Deluxe stays special

Reaching full Deluxe takes roughly the same effort as reaching everything before it combined, so it remains a genuine long-term flex and goal rather than something players blow through in a single weekend.

6. UX Implementation Notes

- Every unlock should trigger a small celebratory moment — a soft sparkle animation and a “New flower unlocked!” banner, consistent with the cozy, low-pressure tone of the rest of the game.
- Locked flowers can appear as soft greyed-out silhouettes in the Wholesale Market with a small lock icon and the sales count needed to unlock them, so players always have a visible next goal.

- Locked tiers can show as a dimmed section header with the unlock requirement listed, so the player always knows what's coming next.
- Consider a small progress bar or “X sold until next unlock” indicator near the Wholesale Market to keep the goal visible without adding pressure.

Note: tiers currently use the flowers already assigned (6/7/8/9). More flowers can be added to each tier later — simply extend the unlock schedule proportionally.
